As agencies and organizations working closely with the business community in Revelstoke and area, we want you to know that we understand the extreme challenges you are facing in the wake of the Covid-19 pandemic and the potential impacts to the local economy, both in the short-term and the long-term.

Revelstoke business community organizations will be working together to produce a streamlined communications and engagement strategy to address COVID-19 and the effects on business in Revelstoke. The group is comprised of leaders representing the Revelstoke Chamber of Commerce, City of Revelstoke, Community Futures Revelstoke, Basin Business Advisors, Tourism Revelstoke and Community Economic Development for Revelstoke and CSRD Area B.

The common goal is to ensure Revelstoke's business stakeholders receive relevant and timely information and tools to endure this crisis. This group is committed to delivering facts from credible sources, preparing tools for resilience and recovery and providing resources for business continuity.

It is up to each individual business to roll out the necessary measures to ensure best practices for owners, employees and patrons, while following the advisement of the Federal and Provincial Authorities. We recommend that business owners familiarize themselves with the following reliable information sources, and monitor them to ensure that they have the most current information.

As partner organizations located together in the Business Information Centre, we will do our best to provide regular updates to the local business community to support you. This group will be meeting weekly to prepare insights and information. Unified communications will be shared through independent stakeholder lists, each organization's websites and social channels as appropriate.

The Revelstoke business community is strong and has proven resilient in critical times. We are all in this together and will work collectively for the well-being of our community.
